MY KIND OF PHOTOGRAPHY

- A Digital Presentation by David Steel

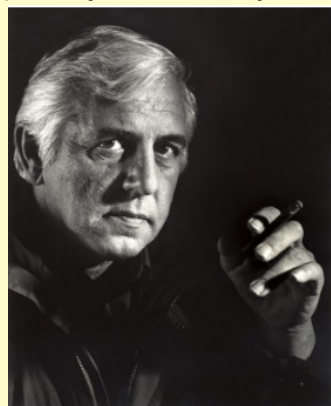

DPAGB (EAF 'A')

Thursday, 2 October 2025 at 7:30 for 8pm

David Steel started out in photography as a teenager after acquiring a wooden contact printing frame for a few pence in a jumble sale. Being interested in chemistry he also mixed his own developers, fixers and toners and spent many happy hours in the darkroom. In 1993, he started to take photography more seriously and joined the Cambridge Camera Club.

Although he has an interest in all forms of photography, his favourite genre is photographing people. He is particularly drawn to street photography and photo-journalism, enjoying capturing people in their natural environment. He also has a deep appreciation for monochrome photography, which he finds complements his interest in photo-journalism by better portraying mood and feeling, allowing the viewer's imagination to play a significant role.

In this presentation called "My Kind of Photography", David reflects a personal vision, where the final image represents his interpretation, thoughts, and feelings rather than a strict representation of reality.
